

Violette Abawi is an accomplished professional with a diverse background in language education, leadership roles, and communication. Violette has a master's degree in modern languages with a concentration in Arabic from DePaul University. Since 1995, Violette has been actively involved in the field of Arabic language education, fostering a deep understanding of the language and its cultural nuances. Throughout Violette's academic journey, she successfully managed to balance her studies with practical experience by working in the language lab, further enriching her understanding of linguistic concepts and pedagogical techniques. Violette Abawi has consistently demonstrated a passion for teaching Arabic and sharing linguistic knowledge with students ranging from elementary to college level.

Prior to attaining her Master's degree, Violette held prominent leadership roles at renowned companies such as Sprint and Cisco Systems. These experiences allowed her to develop exceptional skills in strategic planning, team management, and business operations. Additionally, Violette also dedicated her time and expertise to a non-profit organization, a local Women's association, leveraging her language and business skills to contribute meaningfully to the organization's mission.

Violette's expertise extends beyond language and business. As a skilled communicator, she has served as a broadcaster for an Arabic station in Chicago, Illinois. This role has allowed her to showcase her exceptional communication skills, bringing stories to life and engaging with diverse audiences. Additionally, Violette has been certified to be a human rights consultant from the United States Institute of Diplomacy and Human Rights.

With a unique blend of language proficiency, leadership expertise, and communication skills, Violette Abawi continues to make a significant impact in her professional endeavors. Her ability to seamlessly navigate the intersection of technology, business, and language sets her apart as a versatile and accomplished professional and consultant.